

Japan and East Asia in the American Imperium

Peter J. Katzenstein

Cornell University, December 2008

I. Introduction

II. American Imperium and a Regional World

Imperium

- Territorial power
- Non-territorial power

Region

- Materialist definition
- Ideational definition
- Behavioral definition
- Conclusion

Region States

- Supporters: Japan/East Asia and Germany/W. Europe
- Pivots: Other Regions

III. Regional Policy Initiatives and Regional Institutional Orders

Regional Policy Initiatives

- Nixon Doctrine and the Decline of American Power
- Nixon Doctrine and East Asia
- Regional Trade Initiatives as American Response to Japan's Economic Rise

Regional Institutional Orders

- Two Examples
 - Technology and Production Networks
 - Security: Internal and External Dimensions
 - European Comparisons
- American policy: Bilateralism in Asia vs Multilateralism in Europe
- Ethnic Capitalism in Asian Market Networks vs Law and Politics in a European Polity
 - Japanese networks
 - Chinese networks Law and Politics in the European Polity
 - Law and Politics in the European Polity

IV. Region-Making beyond National Models

Globalization and Internationalization

Japanization, Sinicization, Americanization

- Introduction
- Japanization
- Sinicization
- Americanization

V. Epilogue: China's Rise, East Asia and the American Imperium