

VII. IDE Advanced School (IDEAS)

IDEAS was established as an education wing of the IDE. Since its inauguration in 1990, it has offered postgraduate-level programs in development studies in order to nurture experts who are able to deal with development issues that developing countries face today.

IDEAS offers two types of programs in parallel: a one-year program for Japanese students (September–July) and a six-month overseas fellows program for young government officials and researchers from Asian countries (October–March). During the first six months (October–March), many courses are offered jointly to the two groups in English, enabling close interactions between the Japanese students and overseas fellows. During the programs, fellows and students are expected to develop a comprehensive understanding of national development policies and learn how to propose solutions to problems existing in developing countries. The programs emphasize the practical knowledge necessary to undertake development projects.

The main feature of the curriculum is an introduction consisting of structured cluster courses. In detail, the program provides six core courses including two intensive lectures in the first semester. During the Courses both Japanese students and overseas fellows can learn together about the experiences of Japan and Asia in socio-economic development as well as contemporary issues of development. Through this curriculum, fellows and students are expected to acquire a higher capacity to become experts in the economic and social development of developing countries.

Most Japanese students who successfully complete the program proceed to a graduate school in development studies at an appropriate university abroad.

Training Program for Overseas Fellows

(October 2011–March 2012)

The training program for overseas fellows was initiated in 1991. The objective is to increase absorption capacity of foreign aid in developing countries. The program is designed for young government officials who are in charge of socio-economic development policy, planning and implementation in governmental organizations in developing countries. The program provides opportunities to become familiar with the aid administration policies of Japan and other developed countries as well as to study economic development in Japan and other Asian countries. In the current academic year, 11 government officials and researchers were invited from 11 Asian countries.

Intensive Lecture by Mr. Shigehisa Kasahara (Economic Affairs Officer, Division for Africa, Least Developed Countries and Special Programmes (ALDC), United Nations Conference on Trade and Development)

Training Program for Japanese Students

(September 2011–July 2012)

In the 22nd academic year of this program, we trained 10 Japanese students selected from among 23 applicants.
