

VI. IDE ADVANCED SCHOOL (IDEAS)

IDEAS is an educational wing of IDE. Since its inauguration in 1990, it has offered post-graduate-level programs in development studies in order to nurture experts who are able to deal with development issues that developing countries face today.

IDEAS offers two programs in parallel: a one-year program for Japanese students (First semester: September–March; Second semester: March–July) and a six-month overseas fellows program for young government officials and researchers from Asian and African countries (October–March). A third of classes are offered jointly to the two groups in English, enabling close interaction between the Japanese students and overseas fellows.

IDEAS

During the programs, fellows and students are expected to develop a comprehensive understanding of national development policies and learn how to propose solutions to problems existing in developing countries. The programs emphasize the practical knowledge necessary to undertake development projects.

Most Japanese students who successfully complete the program proceed to graduate schools abroad teaching development studies.

Training Program for Overseas Fellows (October 2015–March 2016)

This program is designed for young government officials who are in charge of socioeconomic development policy, planning and implementation in governmental organizations in developing countries. The program provides opportunities to become familiar with the aid administration policies of Japan and other developed countries. In the academic year 2015-16, 18 government officials and researchers were invited from 12 Asian and 6 African countries. All of them graduated with a Postgraduate Diploma in Development Studies as of March 10, 2016.

Training Program for Japanese Students (First Semester: September 2015–March 2016)

In the 26th academic year of this program, 14 Japanese students were trained. All of them graduated with a Postgraduate Diploma in Development Studies as of March 10, 2016.

Among them, 13 students continue to study the course for the second Semester started from March 14, 2016.

JICA's Training Program on Development of Recycling Policy (contracted program for JICA)
(August 6, 2015- December 25, 2015)

IDE undertook a training program sponsored by Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA).The program is targeted at administrative officers who are in charge of promoting the recycling industry.

This training program consists of lectures and site visits concerning the recycling industry. Participants will learn the 3R policy in Japan and related key concepts such as extended producer responsibility (EPR).

For FY2015, 13 participants from nine countries (Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Kenya, Lebanon, Malaysia, Mexico, Mongolia, Myanmar, Nigeria) stayed in Japan for 18 days (August 26 to September 12).
