

VIII. IDE Advanced School (IDEAS)

Chancellor: Takashi Shiraishi (President, IDE-JETRO)
Secretary- General: Masako Osuna

IDEAS was established as an education wing of the IDE. Since its inauguration in 1990, it has offered postgraduate-level programs in development studies in order to nurture experts who are able to deal with development issues currently faced by developing countries.

Two decades have passed since its establishment. In commemoration of this special occasion, IDEAS held an international workshop on March 10, 2010, to review the past performance and to explore new challenges of Japanese development assistance.

IDEAS offers two parallel programs of study: a one-year program for Japanese students (September–July) and a six-month overseas fellows program for young government officials of Asian countries (October–March). During the first six months (October–March), many courses are offered jointly in English, allowing close interactions between Japanese students and overseas fellows. Through the programs, students are expected to develop a comprehensive understanding of national development policies, so that they will be able to propose solutions to existing development issues, and to acquire practical knowledge necessary for implementing specific projects.

The main feature of the curriculum is an introduction of structured cluster courses. Specifically, the program provides seven core courses including two intensive lectures in the first semester, in which both Japanese students and overseas fellows can learn together about the experiences of Japan and Asia in socioeconomic development as well as contemporary issues of development. Through this curriculum, students are expected to acquire greater capacity to become experts in economic and social development in developing countries.

Japanese students who successfully complete the program can then proceed to a graduate school in development studies at an appropriate university abroad.

Training Program for Overseas Fellows

(October 2009–March 2010)

The training program for overseas fellows was initiated in 1991. The objective is to increase the absorptive capacity for foreign aid in developing countries. This objective can be achieved by training government officials who are in charge of planning and implementing socioeconomic development policies in developing regions. The program provides opportunities to become acquainted with the aid administration policies of Japan and other developed countries as well as to study economic development in Japan and other Asian countries. This current academic year, we invited 17 government officials and researchers from 15 Asian countries.

Financially supported fellows from ERIA and APIC

Recently, in order to promote cooperation with other human resource development organizations, IDEAS started receiving overseas fellows financially supported by such organizations as ERIA (Economic Research Institute for ASEAN and East Asia) and APIC (Association for Promotion of International Cooperation). Out of the 17 overseas fellows hosted by IDEAS in 2009, 11 were supported by IDEAS, 4 by ERIA, and 2 by APIC.
