

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This report is the outcome of the Joint Research Program on the New Regional Foreign Policy of South Africa which was conducted between the Institute of Developing Economies (IDE) and the South African Institute of International Affairs (SAIIA) in 1993 fiscal year.

The final report was presented to the workshop that was convened at the IDE on February 1, 1994. During the discussion there, invaluable comments and information were set forth by the participants. I wish to express my gratitude to the commentators, Prof. Masatoshi OHTA (Kyorin University), Mr. Mitsugi ENDO (Tokyo University), Prof. Minoru OBAYASHI (Ryukoku University) and to the other participants (vide. participants' list of the workshop) and also to the International Exchanges Department of IDE which arranged this program.
